This case strikes at the heart of democracy, where an elected official is being prevented from doing what the people elected him to do. It also disenfranchises every single voter who voted for him by not allowing him to represent their will in County governance.

Under 42 USC 1983 law you must sue the individual who is responsible for the constitutional violation, which is why we sued the individuals. Those individuals will be reimbursed by the counties insurance and also pursuant to Oregon statute that requires a public employee be indemnified for any damages incurred as a result of them acting in their capacity as a public employee.
